Cyril Jackson Primary School, successfully recertified as a National Online Safety School

Cyril Jackson Primary School has successfully completed a comprehensive online safety training programme demonstrating its commitment to keeping children and young people safe online.

Cyril Jackson Primary School – has received a National Online Safety Certified School Accreditation for its whole school community approach to protecting children in the online world.

National Online Safety is a multi-award-winning digital training provider with extensive resources in online safety, developed in line with the Department of Education's statutory requirements.

Its CPD accredited courses and educational resources support UK schools in educating the whole school community in online safety– including all senior leaders, teachers, all school staff and parents – on how to make the internet a safer place for children.

James Southworth, co-founder of National Online Safety, said: "Congratulations to everyone at Cyril Jackson Primary School on re-certifying as a National Online Safety Certified School. By completing our training programme, the school continues its strong commitment to implementing an effective whole school approach to online safety."

"It can be increasingly difficult for schools and parents to stay ahead of online threats and ensure both children and staff are safeguarded from potentially harmful and inappropriate online material. We arm schools with the knowledge they need to understand online dangers and react in the best way possible to any problems."

Tom Sheldon, Computing and Online Safety Lead, said: "Being awarded this National Online Safety accreditation is not just a recognition of our efforts, but a testament to the collective commitment of our community to create a safer digital world for our students and community".

"If anyone in our school community wishes to discuss how to promote online safety at home, our school provision or requires further support, please contact the school directly". [ENDS]
