School House opens its doors

Pupils play a number game in the new building

AN old school keeper's house in Limehouse has been transformed into facilities to support children with additional needs.

The School House was opened at Cyril Jackson School with spacious learning environments, areas for cooking, landscaped outdoor environments and state-of-the-art ICT.

A team provides intensive support to the children to help maximise their progress and opportunities.

The building is also the base for speech and language therapists and, in the future, will include sensory occupational therapy.

The redevelopment scheme was funded by the council and local grants organisation, IDCF.

The School House was opened by Mark Cooke from Barclays Wealth & Investment Management at Canary Wharf. Barclays has supported the school since 2002 giving donations for a variety of projects such as music tuition and after school clubs.
